

ArtAge supplies books, plays, and materials to older performers around the world. Directors and actors have come to rely on our 30+ years of experience in the field to help them find useful materials and information that makes their productions stimulating, fun, and entertaining.

ArtAge's unique program has been featured in Time Magazine, Modern Maturity, on CNN, NBC, and in many other media sources.

ArtAge is more than a catalog. We also supply information, news, and trends on our top-rated website, www.seniortheatre.com. We stay in touch with the field with our very popular e-newsletter, Senior Theatre Online. Our President, Bonnie Vorenberg, is asked to speak at conferences and present workshops that supplement her writing and consulting efforts. We're here to help you be successful in Senior Theatre!

We help older performers fulfill their theatrical dreams!

Time

The present. In the evening

Setting: A table for four.

At Rise: Jeff & Jenny sit at the table, waiting for Alan & Sue who have just returned from an exotic trip. The conversation among the four begins genially, escalating into something else entirely.

JEFF: What glorious, tortuous adventure are we going to endure tonight? Last time it was the Paleolithic caves of Azerbaijan. The time before was Burkina Faso, when we learned how shea nuts were processed. At great length.

JENNY: Just be glad they live in New York now. Sue introduced me to you, remember?

JEFF: And then you introduced me to Alan, who keeps reminding me that he retired at forty-three.

JENNY: You'll be charming for two hours, won't you? It's been three years since last time.

(Alan and Sue enter. Cheek kisses all around)

JEFF: (a significant look from Jenny) Sue! You look fantastic! It's been how many years? Three?

ALAN: Jenny looks quite fantastic herself. So where have you two been lately?

JENNY: We spent last month at the Villa Serbelloni, on Lake Como. Jeff had a global warming conference. I was writing and illustrating an article about the history of the villa.

ALAN: Still staying on the beaten track, I see.

JEFF: The beaten track has its charms. Jenny tells me you just flew in from Australia.

SUE: I persuaded Alan to stop in San Francisco. Twenty-two hours in the air and I'm Jello. You can't pick me up off the floor. That's not counting time on the tarmac.

ALAN: I'm good to fly straight through from Sydney to New York, but Sue can't sleep in a pod.

SUE: Airline pods make me feel like a caterpillar. I keep waking up to burst out of them.

ALAN: So what brings you to San Francisco?

JENNY: We live here.

SUE: Alan never can keep California cities straight.

ALAN: That's because they all start with San something.

JENNY: Except for the ones that start with Los or Las.

JEFF: We used to live in one that started with Los, but now that I'm teaching at Berkeley, we live in one of the Sans.

ALAN (looking around) Quaint little place. Like falling into a time warp. 1956. How'd you happen to choose something Italian?

SUE: Jenny's idea. After I'd told her what we've been eating, she said Georgio's would be the antidote. Alan says Italy is so over, but I'm nostalgic about it. I dream about giandula gelato. I've even dreamt about tortellini.

ALAN: No one goes to Italy anymore. It's become the I word. So, Jeff, where have you been lately?
